WOMAN SLAIN BY KNIFE

GEN. ANGELES ON WAY TO CAPITAL TO DENY PLOT

Gen. Felipe Angeles, Mexican agent, who has been closely watched by Secret Service men during his stay in Boston.

Senora Angeles, wife of General Felipe Angeles, the Villaista chief, defended her husband vigorously today from any charges of being involved in a plot to restore Victoriano Huerta to power in Mexico. She said he is on his way back to Mexico, but probably will stop over in Washington.

General Angeles, who was at the Hotel Brunswick for a week, left suddenly yesterday. It was understood that he started for Washington to assure the State Department that he had nothing to do with any plot to start another revolution in Mexico.

Senora Angeles is quartered at No 110 Newbury street, where she has been staying since January with her seventeen-year-old daughter Isabelle. There are three Angeles boys. The oldest, fourteen years, has been at the Powder Point School on the South Shore. The two youngest lads are twins, nine years old.

The general's wife said at her Newbury street apartments today:

"I wish to deny that my husband is in any kind of a plot with Huerta. He has seen no agent of any faction in Mexico while he was here in Boston.

WENT TO MEXICO.

"I came from Europe with the children last January. We went to Mexico, where we saw General Angeles a while. But our boys could not get suitable education in Mexico now, so I thought them to Boston. The oldest boy has been at the Powder Point School. He has just concluded the spring term there and is going up to a camp in Maine for the Summer.

"General Angeles had not seen one of us since January, so he came up here to be with his family.

"When the General's visit with us was over he started back to Mexico. As far as I know, when he left here his intentions were to go to New York and proceed to Mexico, but I think he may possibly go to Washington before he starts direct for Mexico."

Since Angeles' arrival in Boston he has been under the most careful surveillance. Secret service men have informed the department of Justice at Washington that they have information leading them to believe that Angeles is involved in the Huerta plot.

General Angeles, who protested vigorously to newspapermen at the time of Huerta's arrest that he hoped the United States would hang Huerta, left his hotel, the Brunswick, following a long distance telephone call from Washington.

From Washington advices it was learned that this call was a summons from Enrique C. Llorente, Villa's Washington representative, urging Angeles' presence in Washington immediately. Llorente is already under indictment.

From the evidence gathered all over the United States the agents of the Department of Justice declare that Huerta's plan was to capture Juarez, over the river from El Paso, Texas, and to establish a provisional government there, with Juarez as capital.

It is reported in El Paso today that the Federal government would institute proceedings to deport Huerta and Orozco if the charges of conspiracy against them are proved. This report could not be denied by J. L. Camp, United States District Attorney, in charge of the Federal cases in El Paso.

'SAGE OF CONCORD' AN EXILE

SWEARS THAW NEVER INSANE

SANBORN REMAINS AWAY

Frank B. Sanborn, the "Sage of Concord," has exiled himself from his home town, according to the police of Concord.

Chief Craig said today:

"Frank Sanborn will never come to Concord unless we go after him and bring him here."

There is a warrant out for the arrest of the venerable "Sage" on a charge of being in contempt of Concord District Court. He was ordered a month ago to appear in court and show cause why he should not obey the local health authorities in the famous drain case. So far Mr. Sanborn, philosopher, friend of Thoreau, Emerson and Longfellow, has defied the efforts of the authorities to make him connect his land with the town drainage system.

Quite a mystery developed today as to Mr. Sanborn's whereabout. The "Sage" is a striking figure, with his white hair, strong features and distinctive air. He is not a man to go unnoticed.

But where is he?

He was visiting in Hampton Falls, N. H. He has left there. It was said that he had gone to Portsmouth. But he could not be located in Portsmouth to-day.

Report came from Portsmouth and Concord both that Mr. Sanborn was on his way back home to break another lance with the law which, in this instance, he considers unjust.

The Concord police were asked by telephone at 8:30 what they intended to do when Mr. Sanborn came back to town.

"Will you arrest him?" the police were asked.

"Oh, no," replied the man on the Concord end of the telephone. "We will simply request him to come to court."

It was later reported from a close friend of Mr. Sanborn that the "Sage" was prepared to assert his rights, as he saw them, even to the point of resisting arrest.

This friend declared that the run of townspeople in Concord were enthusiastically in favor of Frank Sanborn and all his ways.

SAGE POPULAR.

According to this friend, the average Concordite doesn't care two whoops whether the "Sage's" private sewer empties into the town system or runs off into space somewhere, but he—the average Concordite—thinks Frank Sanborn is the real salacious goods.

But events didn't eventuate in Concord—not up to mid-afternoon at least—because Mr. Sanborn failed to come to town.

Then Police Chief Craig allowed that the "Sage" won't come at all unless the police "go after him."

Which would mean that Mr. Sanborn is to be an exile from his home town. The warrant can be served anywhere in Massachusetts. If the exile theory is carried out to its logical conclusion, Mr. Sanborn would have to be a stranger to his own State as well to avoid arrest.

The Sanborn estate—where the debatable drain is operating—is out on Elm street a half-mile or so from the central part of Concord.

Mrs. Sanborn and a companion were at the house today. Inquiry there brought answer that Mrs. Sanborn could not tell just where her husband was.

Young Morgan and Bride Slip Into Westwood

Junius Spencer Morgan, grandson of the late J. Pierpont Morgan, and his bride, who was Louise Converse of Boston, slipped as quietly today into Westwood, where the Converses have an estate, as they slipped out of Dedham on their honeymoon two weeks ago.

Morgan, who was known as "Boston Morgan" when at Harvard, arrived at the Dedham station with Mrs. Morgan on an early train. Suit cases were their only baggage. Their arrival was evidently unexpected, for no auto was there to meet them and Mr. Morgan had some little trouble in securing one.

The young couple motored to "the Crossways," the Converse place at Westwood. They have been flitting about New England since their wedding, and their Westwood stay is expected to be brief.

Summer Here at Last; City Folk Swelter

The belated Summer weather which has been expected by Boston ever since the middle of June arrived unannounced early today.

Starting shortly after dawn, the thermometer started a series of short jumps until at ten o'clock it had reached 83 degrees and was still climbing. The highest point for the year was but one degree higher than this, when it reached 84 on June 14.

Forecaster J. W. Smith, in the top of the Federal building and far from the sweltering humanity on the street, said that today was merely a seasonable June day.

State Affairs Interfere with Wilson's Golf

CORNISH, N. H., June 29.—Affairs of state, chief of which are the Mexican situation, now complicated by the arrest of General Huerta, and the diplomatic negotiations with Germany, prevented President Wilson from playing his usual round of golf this morning.

The President was out of bed at 7 and an hour later was hard at work in his library. Secretary of State Lansing is at Amherst and may come here for a conference with the President.

ENORMOUS LOSSES IN GALICIA

By FRANCIS LAVELLE MURRAY,
Special Correspondent of the International News Service.

LONDON, June 29.—The German losses in Galicia are estimated at 90,000 and the Austrian losses at approximately the same figure by the Petrograd correspondent of the Times who has just returned to the Russian capital after a visit to the headquarters of General Ivanoff, commander of the Russian armies in the southern sphere of the eastern theatre.

By FREDERICK WERNER,
Special Correspondent of the International News Service.

BERLIN, June 29.—Another great victory for the Germans all along the line in Galicia was announced today by the German War Office.

The Austro-German army of General Linsingen, which captured Halicz and swept across the Dniester River, has driven the Russian across the Gnit-Lipa River, all the way from Halicz to Pitsjom, which lies on the Gnita Lipa, thirty miles south-east of Lemberg. The Russians are officially reported to be standing their positions upon the Tlusza River and the lower Gnita.

Northeast of Lemberg the Russian forces that fell back upon the River Bug were unable to withstand the crushing drive of the Austro-German forces under Gen. Von Mackensen and crossed the stream at Tolk without the War Office states.

RUSH BIG GUNS FORWARD.

The Russians made a stand at Mosty-Wielki, twenty-eight miles northeast of Lemberg, but the giant guns of the Teutonic allies which had been rushed forward with almost incredible speed, soon smashed the Russian defenses and the Austro-German line was swept forward. It was at this point the Russian line was best intact and the retreat across the Bug began. According to the War Office the Russians are less than twenty miles south of northeastern Galicia.

Petrograd dispatches today reflect a fear on the part of Russian officialdom that Warsaw is now in danger.

There has been a great shift of troops at near Lemberg. Austrians being sent to the north to Halicz to reinforce the army of Field Marshal Von Hindenburg that is fighting on the battle line in front of Warsaw and stretching from Prasnysz across the Vistula to Ivangorod.

ARMIES REALIGNED.

It is evidently the intention of the Austro-German general staffs to try to attack Warsaw from two sides in the same manner that they drove against Przemysl and Lemberg from the south.

A mighty army, equipped with a vast number of big guns is being massed in the region of Ivangorod for a flanking attack against Warsaw.

At the same time the army of General Von Mackensen will attempt to cut northward against the city from Galicia.

In a supreme effort to maintain a foothold in Galicia, Grand Duke Nicholas has realigned his armies upon the River Bug, twenty-five miles inside the Galician border and southward upon a front passing west of Buzk and along the heights of the Gnita Lipa River to the southern reaches of the Dniester.

SANE WHEN HE SHOT WHITE

By L. V. B. RUCKER,
Special Correspondent of the International News Service.

NEW YORK, June 29.—That Harry K. Thaw never was insane, at the time he killed Stanford White or before or after that act, was the declaration today of Dr. Charles P. Bancroft, superintendent of the New Hampshire State Hospital for the Insane.

Dr. Bancroft was a member of the New Hampshire lunacy commission that declared Thaw sane after his escape from Matteawan and is the chief expert alienist aiding Thaw in the present sanity hearing.

That Thaw expressed regret for his crime, said Bancroft, was the chief evidence that he was not insane at the time. A paranoiac always believes his act justifiable. The expert swore that Thaw's act was that of a man actuated by a real regret rather than by a delusion or hallucination.

"I WAS NEVER INSANE."

"The New Hampshire commission," said Dr. Bancroft, "viewed with great interest the report of the State's evidence in former hearings that Thaw was insane. We found no evidence whatever of paranoia. It appeared from the evidence that Thaw's confession was the result of guilty regret rather than a delusion or an hallucination but rather to an actual regret that acted on his mind in a logical manner.

"Thaw now believes that Harry Thaw

As usual, many thousands "put off" getting their tickets until the "last minute," with the resulting disappointment when the distributing agents said "all gone."

To enable those thousands to enjoy this splendid day's outing at the seashore, the American is making arrangements for a similar boat trip on Wednesday, July 14, and it is planned to print the coupon in next Sunday's American.

So remember, please, if you delayed too long and were unable to get your ticket for tomorrow, you will have one more opportunity in next Sunday's American for the July 14 outing.

Pope's Prayer for Success of Italian Army

By International News Service.

ROME, June 29.—Pope Benedict, through the Master of the Sacred Palace of the Vatican, has just formally supported for both private and public use a remarkable prayer imploring victory to the Italian armies. It follows:

"O Jesus Christ, our Lord, who didst so love the sacrifice laid to be wept for it in sorrow, look piously on our beloved Italy. She thou seest is fighting to save safe our national foundation and to protect from her hand to her own unredeemed brethren. Not of usurpation, therefore, unbaptized move her, but justice led her.

"Bless O Jesus, our arms on land and sea, guided their efforts, assist victorious. Bless our soldiers assisted even to the end their proverbial courage. Let from on those brave sons of ours a whole living host shed thy precious blood, so that as many of them as fall victims to their sword may be safe with Thee in Paradise.

"Grant, O Jesus, to the King, his generals and statesmen, those lights and those graces they need in this decisive hour for our beloved country entrusted with special power to breathe into the fainting army and navy that spirit of religion and love of country in this our glorious national crisis and enable them to conquer and to triumph in victory. In that appointed day of power and glory may we all be found worthy before the Eternal Judge."

Belgian Civilians to Get Grain Crops

BAFFLING TRAGEDY IN NEW YORK

By International News Service.

NEW YORK, June 29.—Baffled by the strangest homicide mystery in years in the death of Mrs. Grace Fox, wife of the manager of a National Cash Register branch store, Coroner's Physician Otto Schmultze today contradicted Inspector Faurot's theory of suicide by declaring that the twenty stab wounds in the woman's body and back were inflicted by an unidentified person with whom she struggled desperately before loss of blood caused her collapse.

Faurot's theory of the identity of the slayer has been shattered circumstances surrounding the tragedy which the investigators from police headquarters and the coroner's office.

ACCUSES BOOK AGENT.

Mrs. Fox was found dying in her apartments at No. 418 West One Hundred and Forty-second street after a book agent had been seen to enter and had fallen down and burst hereself. Later he described, after the Inspector knife wounds had been discovered, that the woman said a book agent had attacked her.

Inspector Faurot said that he was convinced that the woman had killed herself in a fit of insanity. Coroner Schmultze contended and the evidence that proved that the woman's body and back were stabbed by a knife. The weapon was not found.

When Mrs. Fox was discovered she was almost dead. She was unable to speak. Her husband, questioned by the police, who declared a suicide had attacked her.

NO MOTIVE FOR SUICIDE.

Physicians who made a careful examination of her body insist that the wounds could not have been inflicted by herself.

A man who said he was a magazine subscription agent, who had called on Mrs. Fox yesterday, a description of and whom she disliked or feared because she "didn't like his looks," is in the magic description the police have of the man who may have been the woman's slayer.

If the woman committed suicide, a motive as yet is utterly lacking. For Mrs. Fox and her husband, who is fifty, were devoted to each other and their married life has been unusually happy. Her husband's income permitted him to supply her every want.

JEWELS NOT DISTURBED.

The woman's wounds were on the jugular, clavicle, arms and the breast.

THAW ALWAYS SANE, SAYS EXPERT

never was insane" asked Deputy Attorney-General Cook.

"Yes," was the answer of Dr. Babcroft.

"We found no evidence that Thaw ever was insane. A paranoiac never expresses regret for his act, as Thaw did to me. He said the moment Stanford White lay dead before him on Madison Square roof garden he knew he had done wrong and regretted the killing. A paranoiac always believes his acts of violence justifiable."

"Is it not the act of a paranoiac," asked Cook, "when the brain explosion occurred to perpetrate his act of violence in a public and a most spectacular manner, and then when insanity is appeared to calm down and submit quietly to arrest?"

"I would not say so," answered the alienist. "I would say rather it was the act of a sane man, actuated by some grievance, real or believed."

PRE-NATAL INFLUENCE.

Dr. Babcroft outlined the possibility of pre-natal influence, and went into a long dissertation on the effects on the child of accidents to the parents, worries and sickness on their part.

This was to pave the way for Cook's proposed effort to show that Mrs. Mary C. Thaw's nervous state at Thaw's birth was responsible for his alleged paranoiac tendencies.

Again and again Cook asked Babcroft about Thaw's alleged will and codicil, in which he referred to White and others as ruining thousands of young girls. Also he referred to Thaw's reference to a house in Twenty-sixth street kept by White and other prominent men where workmen constantly heard the agonized cries of fifteen-year-old girls.

As Cook referred to these things and other salacious details brought out in the two Thaw trials, Dr. Babcroft each time answered:

"I read that evidence but I know nothing of the facts."

GAMING BACK OF DISMISSAL OF THAW

The official record on file in the office of the secretary of Harvard University shows that Harry Kendall Thaw, now trying to prove his sanity before a jury in New York, was requested to "withdraw" from Harvard in 1892 because of "lack of preparedness and gambling."

No mention is made of any such act as would tend to support the assertion of Thaw's counsel, given out to Deputy Attorney-General Herbert of New York that Thaw was expelled from Harvard because he whipped boys in his apartments.

Attorney Daniel J. Coakley, who has been engaged to look after Thaw's interests in Boston, today criticised Deputy Attorney-General for giving official sanction to such a statement and said the only method in New York which permitted cases "to be tried out of court," Mr. Coakley said he found pride in the superior methods pursued in Massachusetts.

"Harry Kendall Thaw—Entered November 1890—Withdrew February 23, 1892—Advised to withdraw because of lack of preparedness and gambling."

Through the sentence beginning with the word "Advised" and ending with the word "withdraw" a red ink has been drawn which is the official college mark, showing that the entry in question had complied with the faculty decree.

FIRST PUBLICATION.

This is the first time the actual record of Thaw's exit as a student at Cambridge has been made public, despite the efforts of agents and detectives representing the office of the Attorney-General and District Attorney in New York to procure it.

Thaw sympathizers today called attention to the fact that the word "withdrawal" was used rather than the word expelled.

The finding of the Thaw record is only rendered unnecessary by the finding of the deposition of President Emeritus Charles W. Eliot at his Summer place at Northeast Harbor. Mr. Eliot told interviewers he had no recollection of the Thaw incident.

Attorney Cook today received the following telegram, which disposed of the contemplated junket of Joint counsel to secure Mr. Eliot's affidavit.

Bangor, Me., June 28, 1915.

Daniel H. Coakley, Esq., Pemberton Building, Boston, Mass.

We shall not take Dr. Eliot's deposition.

(Signed) BARTLETT BROOKS

Mr. Brooks is a Boston attorney who was retained to act for the Attorney-General of New York in procuring the Eliot testimony on the reason for Thaw's sudden departure from Harvard after having been a student there two years.

Attorney Daniel H. Coakley, on behalf of Thaw, today issued the following statement in Boston:

"I am impressed with the superiority of our conduct in criminal trials as against that of New York, by the circumstances of this phase of the Thaw case.

CRITICIES BECKER.

"Mr. Becker, the deputy attorney-general gave out an interview in which he said that he had 'proved to his satisfaction' the truth of the story that Thaw had been guilty of degraded practices while at Harvard.

and throat. One thrust of the knife had severed the jugular vein.

That robbery was not the motive for the murder was shown by the fact that Mrs. Fox's jewels and money were not touched.

To keep their movements secret the police guarded the house front and rear. No one was permitted to enter the vacant lot in the rear and no one was allowed near the Fox apartment, where flashlight photographs were taken of the rooms and their contents.

How the murderer escaped from the apartments is a mystery unless he went down in the rear fire escape. Also it is a mystery how he got into the flat.

Mr. Fox, who originally came from St. Louis, is a brother of Della Fox, the comic opera star. For fear that he might tell something regarding someone suspected of the murder the police had him flanked on all sides from the time he hurried from his office to his home and then to the hospital, until he returned to his rooms.

The first news of the tragedy came when Samuel Woolsey, the negro elevator boy in Beacon Hall, who also has charge of the switchboard, got a telephone message from Mrs. Fox, who said:

"Please come to me, I want help."

The boy rode up to the third floor. The door leading to the foyer hall in the Fox apartment was locked. Looking under the door, where there is a crack, he could get a clear view into the bathroom. He saw blood on the tiled floor and a red trail leading to the telephone in the foyer hall.

William Beagle, superintendent of Beacon Hall, was called. He summoned Patrolmen Coogan and Kenny, who broke in the door. On the bed in her bedroom lay Mrs. Fox. She was conscious, but weakening fast.

To Beagle she said, according to a statement given out by the police:

"I fell in the bathroom and hurt myself. You see that my money is safe. I'll hold you responsible."

She then told where she had $40. Beegle found it. On her left hand were her diamond engagement ring and a wedding band, and on her right wrist a gold bracelet. On the dresser were other articles of jewelry, none of which had been disturbed.

Mrs. Fox was dressed only in a nightgown and stockings. There were no knife holes in the gown, the police find, which only added to the mystery.

Mrs. Fox told the police he had left his wife at 8 o'clock yesterday morning. At that time she wore the same night gown and stockings she wore when found wounded. He said that he could not even suggest why any one would want to kill her.

"The theory that she committed suicide is absurd," said the husband. "She loved life and had everything to live for."

The elevator boy said it was customary for all persons calling at Beacon Hall to be announced by phone before they were permitted to go upstairs and no pedlers or agents were allowed in the house.

"Certainly nobody was announced at Mrs. Fox's apartments," he said. "No one called there during the day, as far as I know, and I should have known. Of course, it was possible for some one to have stolen up the stairs while I was at the telephone or at an upper floor in my car."

TEUTON CHIEFS DISCUSSED U.S. NOTE

By FREDERICK WERNER.
Special Correspondent of the International News Service.

BERLIN, June 29.—Dr. Von Jagow, the German Minister, and Chancellor Von Bethmann-Holwegg, who went to Vienna upon a missio of extreme importance, left the Austrian capital for Berlin today.

Although the news has generally circulated, without denial, that the journeys of the German ministers of state had to do with the Balkan situation, it is now reported upon the best of authority that the relations between German and the United States were also discussed.

The effect of this report was to show that the governments of the Teutonic allies are acting in accord in connection with the attitude of Germany toward the United States.

The fact that Dr. Von Jagow and Dr. Von Bethmann-Hollwegg discussed the German reply with attaches of the Austrian government does not necessarily alter the belief that the German answer to the second note relative to submarine warfare will be friendly and conciliatory. However, it does show that the matters discussed were so important they could not be entrusted to the telegraph.

U. S. Note to Germany Demands Speedy Settlement for Sinking of Frye

Wilson Points Out That Treaty Has Been Violated; "Not Prize Court Matter."

WASHINGTON, June 29.—Diplomatic circles are awaiting with keenest interest Germany's reply to the new note sent by the United States to the Kaiser, repudiating the German attitude concerning the sinking of the American ship William P. Frye.

The text of the United States note was not made public till this morning, and its specific demands were immediately viewed by officials here as constituting a polite and friendly but none the less insistent demand for speedy settlement.

President Wilson, in his consideration as presented through Ambassador Gerard, takes the ground that Germany has violated a treaty and that indemnity therefor is a matter not for a German prize court to determine, but instead for direct diplomatic adjustment.

"The United States cannot recognize," says the United States note, "the propriety of submitting this claim to a German court." Furthermore it declares the United States does not perceive the necessity for postponing settlement.

FIRM POINTS OF U. S. NOTE.

Other emphatic statements contained in the note are:

"The United States regrets to find that it cannot concur in the conclusions reached by the Imperial German government."

"The government of the United States does not find in the treaty stipulations mentioned any justification for the detention of the vessel and does not consider that the German prize court has any jurisdiction over the question of the amount of indemnity to be paid by the Imperial German government on account of its admitted liability for the destruction of an American vessel on the high seas."

"The government of the United States holds that these treaty provisions do not authorize the destruction of a neutral vessel in any circumstances."

"Your contention that the destruction of the vessel was justified by the provisions of Article 155 does not seem to be well founded."

"The destruction either of the cargo or the vessel could not be justified in the circumstances of this case under any accepted rule of international law."

"It seems clear to the government of the United States that whether the cargo of the Frye is regarded as contraband or as non-contraband, the destruction of the vessel was a violation of the obligations imposed upon the Imperial German government under existing treaty stipulations between the United States and Prussia."

"The real question between the two governments is what reparation must be made for a breach of treaty obligations, and that is not a question which falls within the jurisdiction of a prize court."

GERMANY ADMITS LIABILITY.

Publication of the United States note was made by agreement with the German Foreign Office. The note was sent on June 21 by the United States, specifically asking Germany to reconsider her refusal to settle by direct diplomatic negotiation that Germany has a right to stop liability, instead of by prize court proceedings, the claim presented on behalf of the captain and owners of the American ship William P. Frye, sunk with her cargo of wheat by the commerce raider Prinz Eitel Friedrich, Ambassador Gerard cabled that he had delivered the note last Saturday afternoon.

The American government insists throughout that, inasmuch as the Germany has admitted liability for the sinking of the Frye, under the treaty of 1828, prize court proceedings are unnecessary, and not binding upon the United States.

Aside from the question of how the indemnity should be paid, the note brings out also to the refusal of the United States to accept the bare fact of carrying of contraband by American ships by the destruction of the contraband and the ship carrying it.

While no mention of submarines was made either the first German note or the present reply, occasion was taken to deny this right, because of a belief that admission of it now might, or in the future, be used as a justification for submarine attacks on American ships.

TEXT OF FRYE NOTE.

Department of State,
WASHINGTON, June 24, 1915.

You are instructed to present the following note to the German Minister of Foreign Affairs:

I have the honor to inform Your Excellency that I am duly communicated to my government your note of the 7th inst., on the subject of the claim presented in my note of April 3 last, on behalf of the owners and captain of the American sailing vessel William P. Frye in consequence of her destruction by the German auxiliary cruiser Prinz Eitel Friedrich.

In reply, I am instructed by my government to say that it has carefully considered the reasons given by the Imperial German government for urging that this claim should be passed upon by the German prize court, instead of being settled by direct diplomatic discussion between the two governments, as proposed by the government of the United States, and that it regrets to find that it cannot concur in the conclusions reached by the Imperial German government.

GERMAN VIEW SURPRISES.

As pointed out in my last note to you on this subject, dated April 30, the government of the United States has considered that the only question under discussion was the method which should be adopted for ascertaining the amount of indemnity to be paid under an admitted liability, and it notes with surprise that in addition to this question, the Imperial German government now desires to raise some questions as to the meaning and effect of the treaty stipulations under which it has admitted its liability.

If the government of the United States correctly understands the position of the Imperial German government as now presented, it is that the provisions of article 12 of the treaty of 1799, between the United States and Prussia, which is continued in force by the treaty of 1828, justified the commander of the Prinz Eitel Friedrich in sinking the William P. Frye, although making the Imperial German government liable for the damages suffered in consequence, that, inasmuch as the treaty provides no specific method for ascertaining the amount of indemnity to be paid, that question must be submitted to the German prize court for determination.

The government of the United States, on the other hand, does not find in the treaty stipulations mentioned, any justification for the sinking of the Frye, and does not consider that the German prize court has any jurisdiction over the question of the amount of indemnity to be paid by the imperial German government on account of its admitted liability for the destruction of an American vessel on the high seas.

You state in your note of the 7th inst. that article 13 of the above-mentioned treaty of 1799 "expressly reserves to the party at war the right to stop the carrying of contraband and to detain the contraband. It follows from that if it cannot be accomplished in any other way, the stopping of the supply may, in the extreme case, be effected by the destruction of the contraband and of the ship carrying it."

The government of the United States cannot concur in this conclusion. On the contrary, it holds that these treaty provisions do not authorize the destruction of a neutral vessel in any circumstances. By its express terms, the treaty prohibits even the detention of a neutral vessel carrying contraband if the master of the vessel is willing to surrender the contraband. Article 13 provides:

"In the case supposed of a vessel stopped for articles of contraband, if the master of the vessel stopped will deliver out the goods supposed to be of contraband nature, he shall be permitted to do it, and the vessel shall not in that case be carried into another port, nor further detained, but shall be allowed to proceed on her voyage."

In this case the admitted facts show that pursuant to orders from the commander of the German cruiser, the master of the Frye undertook to throw overboard the cargo of that vessel, but that before the work of delivering out the cargo was finished, the vessel with the cargo was sunk by order of the German commander.

For these reasons, even if it be assumed, as Your Excellency has done, that the cargo was contraband, your contention that the destruction of the vessel was justified by the provisions of article 13 does not seem to be well founded. The government of the United States has not thought it necessary in the discussion of this case to go into the question of the contraband or non-contraband character of the cargo. The Imperial German government has admitted that this question makes no difference so far as its liability for damages is concerned, and the result is the same so far as the justification for the sinking of the vessel is concerned. As shown above, if we assume that the cargo was contraband, the master of the Frye should have been allowed to deliver it out, and the vessel should have been allowed to proceed on her voyage.

QUOTES PRUSSIAN TREATY.

On the other hand, if we assume that the cargo was non-contraband, the destruction either of the cargo or the vessel could not be justified by the circumstances of this case under any accepted rule of international law. Attention is also called to the provisions of article 12 of the treaty of 1799 between the United States and Prussia, which, like article 13 of the treaty of 1785, was continued in force by article 12 of the treaty of 1828. So far as the provisions of article 12 of the treaty of 1785 apply to the question under consideration, they are as follows:

"If one of the contracting parties should be engaged in war with any other power, the free intercourse and commerce of the subjects or citizens of the party remaining neutral with the belligerent powers, shall not be interrupted. On the contrary, in that case, as in full peace, the vessels of the neutral party may navigate freely to and from the ports and on the coasts of the belligerent parties, free goods making free goods, insomuch that all things shall be adjudged free, which shall be on board any vessel belonging to the neutral party, although such things belong to an enemy of the other."

It seems clear to the government of the United States, therefore, that whether the cargo of the Frye is regarded as contraband, or as non-contraband, the destruction of the vessel was, as stated in my previous communication on this subject, "a violation of the obligations imposed upon the Imperial German government under existing treaty stipulations between the United States and Prussia."

DISAGREES WITH GERMANY.

For these reasons the government of the United States must disagree with the contention which it understands is now made by the Imperial German government that an American vessel carrying contraband may be destroyed without liability or accountability beyond the payment of such compensation for damages as may be fixed by a German prize court. The issue thus presented arises on a disputed interpretation of treaty stipulations, the settlement of which requires direct diplomatic discussion between the two governments and cannot properly be based upon the decision of the German prize court, which is in no way conclusive or binding upon the government of the United States.

Moreover, even if no disputed questions of treaty interpretation was involved, the admission by the Imperial German government of its liability for damages for sinking the vessel would seem to make it unnecessary, so far as this nation is concerned, to seek the prize court to decide whether the destruction of the ship and cargo was legal and under what conditions the property sunk was liable for confiscation, which you state, in your note dated June 7, are questions which should be decided by the prize court.

QUESTION OF REPARATION.

In so far as these questions relate to the cargo, they are outside of the present discussion, because, as pointed out in my previous note to you on the subject, dated April 30, "the claim under discussion does not include damages for the destruction of the cargo."

The real question between the two governments is what reparation must be made for a breach of treaty obligations, and that is not a question which falls within the jurisdiction of the prize court.

In my note on the subject the government of the United States requested "that full reparation be made by the Imperial German government for the destruction of the William P. Frye." Reparation necessarily includes an indemnity for the actual property loss sustained and the government of the United States takes this opportunity to assure the Imperial German government that such indemnity if promptly paid will be accepted as satisfactory reparation, but it is also necessary that the court to determine what reparation should be made or what reparation would be satisfactory to the government of the United States.

Your excellency states in your note of June 7, that in the event the prize court should not grant indemnity in accordance with the treaty requirements, the German government would not hesitate to arrange for equitable indemnity, but it has also necessary that the government of the United States should be satisfied with the amount of the indemnity and it would seem to be more appropriate and convenient that an arrangement for equitable indemnity should be agreed upon now, rather than later.

The decision of the prize court, even on the question of the amount of indemnity to be paid, would not be binding or conclusive on the government of the United States. The government of the United States does not find in the treaty stipulations mentioned any justification for the detention of a vessel, but it does consider that the sinking of the Frye is a violation of a treaty and therefore is a matter for a judgment by direct diplomatic discussion between the two governments, and is in no way dependent upon the action of a German prize court.

For the reasons above stated, the government of the United States cannot recognize the propriety of submitting the claim presented by it on behalf of the owners and captain of the Frye to the German prize court for settlement.

OBJECTS TO PRIZE COURT.

The government of the United States is not concerned with any proceedings which the imperial German government may wish to take on "other claims of neutral and enemy interested parties," which have been presented by the government of the United States, but which you state in your note of June 7 make prize court proceedings in this case indispensable, and it does not perceive the necessity for postponing the settlement of the present claim pending the consideration of those other claims by the prize court.

The government of the United States, therefore, suggests that the Imperial German government reconsider the subject in the light of these considerations, and, because of the objections against resorting to the prize court, the government of the United States renew its former suggestion that an effort be made to settle this claim by direct diplomatic negotiations.

ATTRACTIONS AT BOSTON THEATRES

WARM-WEATHER SHOW AT KEITH'S

By FREDERICK JOHNS.

One of the first acts of the National Defence League should be to teach the inhabitants of this grand republic their national song.

A patriotic but misguided audience gravely arose at Keith's yesterday afternoon when the Seven Colonial Belles played "Old Lang Syne" at the end of a medley, and remained standing until rude laughter from the few that knew the "Star Spangled Banner" when they hear it, caused it to sit down again.

Aside from this exhibition, the afternoon was pleasantly cool at Keith's. The show was adapted to warm weather and the house was cool and comfortable.

Elizabeth Bryce and Charles King, a lively couple from the "Passing Show" one of the musical hits of New York this season, sang a number of bright songs and danced delightfully.

Solly Ward and Lillian Fitzgerald, a pair of burlesque stars, gave an amusing sketch which included two tattoos. The Colonial Belles are a costumed musical act which is refined and attractive. Billy McDermott, a former soldier in Corey's army, is funny if you like his type.

Frederick Bowers, the song writer and tenor, has a carload of scenery to illustrate his personal contributions to the world's library of popular music.

Miss Jane Connolly and Company have a pretty little sketch called "A Strong Cup of Tea," which would be stronger if Miss Connolly were a better actress. The Regent Quartette were a party of ex-opera singers who sang rather well.

Boston Theatre.

"Her Own Way," adapted from the great play of the same name by Clyde Fitch, with Florence Reed, late star of "The Yellow Ticket," in the principal role, heads the big array of picture features offered at the Boston Theatre this week. "Her Own Way" originally written by Clyde Fitch for Clara Bloodgood, is an intensely interesting and gripping love story of New York society life.

Caroline B. Nichols and the Fadettes Woman's orchestra of Boston offer an entirely new repertoire of musical selections, and other strong features include Charlie Chaplin in a new comedy picture; Mary Pickford, in a delightful romance with the million-dollar cast, the eighth installment of "The Goddess," Gaumont Mortis' great serial of love and finance with Earle Williams and Anita Stewart.

Globe Theatre.

In view of the fact that Lowe's vaudeville has been closed, owing to remodelling, Manager Lowe is making every effort has been made to have all his big features at the Globe Theatre. Among the head line features were Robert E. O'Connor and Company, in the comedy dramatic playlet entitled, "The Stick Up Man." This which pleased the large audiences yesterday and made a decided hit. Sylvester and Jones, popular singers, pleased with their songs and feelings. The Zoeller Trio delighted with their sensational acrobatic stunts.

Lexington Park.

Today is school day at this famous amusement park, when hundreds of school children from Worcester will be entertained. Special events have been planned and altogether, a pleasant outing is anticipated. In the Rustic Theatre the Adam Good Stock Company presented the thrilling race track play, "The Delmar Handicap."

THE MASTER MIND AT THE MAJESTIC

Edmund Breese, supported by the Lonergan players, in "The Master Mind," proved a strong attraction at both performances at the Majestic Theatre yesterday. The role is considered the one made to be Mr. Breese's best part, that of an old valet, ingenious and efficient, but in reality the leader of a dashing band of thieves.

Daniel H. Carter, the author, has supplied an excellent medium for Mr. Breese, whom patrons of the Majestic should remember here for about a week to be seen in his famous role. The story is a thrilling one at times, dealing with crime, with a touch of romance, but Mr. Breese, master of ceremonies, made the part real.

Others in the cast included Jean Mackaye, Tom White, George Nicholls, George B. Connor and Jack Carlin, each of whom was fully equal to the demands placed upon them. A new 8 reel will rounded performance.

Modern Theatre.

"Graustark," adapted in six acts into one of the most dramatic photoplays of the season from the famous novel by George McCutcheon, is the principal part of the excellent bill at the Modern Theatre this week. With Francis X. Bushman as the American hero, Greenhall Lorey, who fouls the machinations of the political conspirators of the mythical Kingdom over which the heroine, Princess Yetive, rules and Miss Beverly Bayne as the princess, the Essanay Film Company has provided a cast of actors that carries the story of the power of "love behind the throne," through a thrilling series of pictures that run the gamut of romance, melodrama and strong heart interest. A new program by the Modern Quartette, the continuation of "The Goddess" and the Pathe Weekly completes the bill.

Pemberton Inn.

The unseasonable weather of the past weeks has not kept the crowds from Pemberton Inn and every afternoon and evening this popular dining resort is thronged with parties who have motored down from the city to have come by steamer.

The dansants, which alternate with the cabaret every evening, have become tremendously popular with guests, the chief feature of which is the exhibition of the latest modern dances by Miss Camilla. Miss Camilla Sawyer and the Bostonian Quartet.

Provincetown Trips.

On a pleasant day there is no more delightful way of spending an outing than that taken the deep-sea day trip to Provincetown on the big iron steamship Dorothy Bradford of the Cape Cod Line, which leaves Bay Line Wharf, No. 400 Atlantic avenue, week days at 9 and Sundays and holidays at 9:30.

Coming Events.

The attraction for the coming week at the Majestic Theatre, beginning with the matinee performances on the holiday, Monday, will be "Tess of the Storm Country," with Miss Ernestine Morley, as the visiting star with the Lonergan Players in the title role.

Park Theatre.

Three hours of unusually interesting and pleasing entertainment amid scenes appropriate and inviting surroundings is the offering of the big double Paramount Pictures program at the Park Theatre this week. Two of the latest Paramount releases top the bill, Mary Pickford in the Oliver Morosco five-part photoplay adaption of Basil King's sensationally successful and popular novel, "The Web of Life," and Victor Moore in the funny, hilarious photo-dramatization of "Chimmie Fadden."

The widely popular comedy favorite, Charles Chaplin, is also seen in another number of the big Park photoplay bill this week, appearing in a screamingly funny farce comedy, particularly well suited to Charlie Chaplin's inimitable comedy methods. Mildred White, the noted soprano, adds much to the musical program in an original "Land of Summer" and other features of merit which give splendid balance to the entire program are the Park Topical Review and Pathe News, the Paramount Sunday Travel Picture and the specially arranged musical offerings of the Park Symphonic orchestra under the direction of Charles Frank.

Fernecroft Inn.

Much interest centres in the announced change in ownership of Fernecroft Inn, the popular Mudbrick resort and many friends of Hugh Bancroft, Tom White, George Nichols, George B. Connor and Jack Carlin, each of whom was fully equal to the demands placed upon them. A new 8 reel will rounded performance.

Modern Theatre.

"Graustark," adapted in six acts into one of the most dramatic photoplays of the season from the famous novel by George McCutcheon, is the principal part of the excellent bill at the Modern Theatre this week. With Francis X. Bushman as the American hero, Greenhall Lorey, who fouls the machinations of the political conspirators of the mythical Kingdom over which the heroine, Princess Yetive, rules and Miss Beverly Bayne as the princess, the Essanay Film Company has provided a cast of actors that carries the story of the power of "love behind the throne," through a thrilling series of pictures that run the gamut of romance, melodrama and strong heart interest. A new program by the Modern Quartette, the continuation of "The Goddess" and the Pathe Weekly completes the bill.

Pemberton Inn.

The unseasonable weather of the past weeks has not kept the crowds from Pemberton Inn and every afternoon and evening this popular dining resort is thronged with parties who have motored down from the city to have come by steamer.

The dansants, which alternate with the cabaret every evening, have become tremendously popular with guests, the chief feature of which is the exhibition of the latest modern dances by Miss Camilla. Miss Camilla Sawyer and the Bostonian Quartet.

Provincetown Trips.

On a pleasant day there is no more delightful way of spending an outing than that taken the deep-sea day trip to Provincetown on the big iron steamship Dorothy Bradford of the Cape Cod Line, which leaves Bay Line Wharf, No. 400 Atlantic avenue, week days at 9 and Sundays and holidays at 9:30.

Coming Events.

The attraction for the coming week at the Majestic Theatre, beginning with the matinee performances on the holiday, Monday, will be "Tess of the Storm Country," with Miss Ernestine Morley, as the visiting star with the Lonergan Players in the title role.

'YELLOW TICKET' AT CASTLE SQUARE

"The Yellow Ticket," Michael Morton's thrilling melodrama is three acts exposing the horrors of the "Pale of Settlement" in Russia, was presented to an enthusiastic audience yesterday at the Castle Square Theatre.

A Jewish girl called in the belief of her father at St. Petersburg, dying by accident on the return from America, can legally go only to another city in Russia. She, however, makes her an outcast everywhere, depriving her of police protection and compels to lead a career full with the police conspiring against her, making the climax when the head of the police seeks to dishonor her and meets death at her hands.

To escape the police Sabaroff with a simple matter except for the fact that Dora Arnold, an American journalist backed by the American embassy, threatens to destroy the reputation of a high Russian official unless he lets to parole. As the wife of the newspaper man she is permitted to leave Russia and all her sorrows behind.

The role of Marya Varenka was strikingly portrayed by Miss Dora Clemens, and that of Arthur Bernard Journalist by Mr. Carleton. They were well supported by the other Castle Players.

Norumbega Park.

Two large audiences attended the performances yesterday in the famous open air theatre. Heading the bill is Harcourt, the man of the mirror, whose reflection among the growing man, flight before your eyes, he grows more six inches in height, reduces his height of his arms twelve inches and the length of his gown from a long skirt to a ball room. Without doubt, this is one of the most marvelous acts ever staged in Norumbega Park. Following Harcourt, Hall and Dunning in an act full of pleasing variety and comedy. Nowlan and Rich in a sketch entitled "A Barber's Busy Day" were extremely funny with quips and talk.

The Pops.

Clement Lenour made his first appearance of the season upon the conductor's stand at the "Pops" last night. He had selected a very agreeable programme, and a big audience assembled which welcomed him warmly.

The program, which included the "Orpheus" and "Tales of Hoffman" selections from Herbert, Soupe, Strauss and Verdi, and Goumod's Hymn to St Cecilia was very spiritually played. Wednesday night is Request Night and Saturday night Patriotic and Closing night.

Bass Point and Nahant.

The exhilarating hours sail on the palatial steamers of the Bass Point and Nahant line to those delightful seaside Summer resorts on the North Shore. Bass Point and Nahant, has become immensely popular for excursionists. At Bass Point the two famous hotels the Relay House and the Bass Point House are under the management of Shorey Brothers and tempting menus for dinners and suppers for guests.

Bowdoin Square Theatre.

Two hundred and fifty brides, brides and graduates and yesterday at the Bowdoin Square Theatre there was a goodly number of graduates who came to enjoy the show of a musical comedy presented by Violet Mascotte's Forty Merrie Maids.

Converse Is Hurt in Auto Accident

Colonel Harry E. Converse of Marion, president of the Boston Rubber Company, his wife and another man and his wife were thrown from the Converse auto and badly bruised when an auto truck collided with it at the corner of Randolph and Turnpike streets, Canton.

MOTOR NOTES

By J. C. KERRISON.

The absence of accident and the record-breaking speed of 97.6 miles an hour in the 500-mile race at Chicago on Saturday, proves conclusively the speed and safety of the wooden racing surface. Heretofore the practicability and safety of using for high speed work had been in doubt, and the results of the racing Saturday were awaited with interest by speedway builder, the race promotor and the driver.

Indianapolis suffered severely from regrettable accidents on her opening event over half the distance had gone, and the dedication of the wooden speedway at Chicago was looked upon as the great test in the racing world.

Wooden surfaces have withstood the test. There is now no question about the speed ability and safety of these speedways. Sheepshead Bay's speedway has a slightly greater banking than has the one at Chicago, and the conditions for the coming race a speed of at least 100 miles an hour will be attained.

It is hoped that while the speed may be greater the accidents will not prove in proportion. It is also said that the Sheepshead Bay race will be as free from fatalities and serious injuries as were Indianapolis and Chicago this year.

The Mitchell eight-cylinder reached Boston yesterday and is on exhibition in the rooms of the local company. The car is a notable attractive proposition and is constructed along the latest and most approved lines, the motor being of the L-type class and particularly accessible.

New, Positive Treatment to Remove Hair or Fuzz

(Beauty Notes)

Women are fast learning the value of the use of delatone for removing hair or fuzz from face, neck or arms. A paste is made with some powdered delatone and water and spread on the hairy surface. In 2 or 3 minutes it is rubbed off, the skin washed and ugly bit of hair has disappeared. No failure will result if you are careful to buy genuine delatone.—Advertisement.

FOUR-YEAR-OLD DESERTED BOY WANTS A HOME

Freddie Stuart, a four-year-old abandoned youngster, is looking for a permanent home. Just at present he is living with the family of Mrs. Henry A. Pratt at No. 21 Tempe street in the West End.

Freddie's history, though brief, has been varied. About ten months ago, a woman, presumed to be his mother, left him with a Canton family. This woman said that she would be glad to pay board for the little fellow, if she could only be sure that he was in careful hands. She then went away and has not been heard from since.

Freddie soon grew into the hearts of the Canton family. But when the head of this house lost his job hard times descended on the little cottage in Canton, and it was decided that outside aid would have to be given.

The State Board of Charities agreed to pay two dollars a week for Freddie's board. Last week the State Board of Charities decided it could not pay the child's board any longer. The Canton man was in despair. As a final resort, he appealed to Mrs. Susan E. Stevens of Malden, president of the Patriot Dames, with an office at No. 100 Bolyston street, whose sympathy was immediately enlisted in the finding of a new home for little Freddie. At her own expense she placed him in the home of Mrs. Pratt on Temple street.

Mrs. Stevens will be glad to hear from anyone who can give the boy a permanent home.

MUSICK SAYS HE IS SINGING PRAISES

Norwood Machinist Had Suffered for the Past Eight Years.

Nature's best and most valuable gift, namely, health, is too often sacrificed on the altar of inattention, for nature's warnings are positive and they always indicate the presence of some trouble that must be taken care of.

At this time of the year our bodies, like our homes, need a thorough "house-cleaning." The headaches, dizziness, bloating of the stomach, coated tongue, general "run-down" condition, or any of the symptoms of sickness that you are experiencing now are nature's signals that the organs of your body need an overhauling and toning up.

There is no remedy on the market that can accomplish this as well as Plant Juice, the new herbal stomach preparation. Its action is remarkable in all cases where the run-down system requires nourishment or where the system is being weakened by liver, kidney or bladder trouble. It is not one of those temporary stimulants, but it has a far-reaching and permanent effect, which gives inspiration and optimism to the tired body.

Recent testimonials received from local people have proven that this notable remedy has been remarkably successful as a germ destroyer, tissue builder and a "builder-up" of rundown people. For instance, the signed statement was recently received of Mr. Henry Musick, who resides at No. 21 Park street, Norwood, Mass. Mr. Musick is well known machinist in Norwood, having lived there for some time. He stated:

"I had stomach, liver and kidney trouble for about seven or eight years. My food fermented and formed gas, pressed under my heart and caused palpitation. I read about Plant Juice, and although skeptical, as I had used many other remedies, it helped me from the very first day. I can now eat any kind of food, no more pains in my stomach, and I am now feeling the best I have in years. In fact, I am telling all of my friends about Plant Juice."

The Plant Juice man is at the Liggett Drug Store, corner of Washington and Avon streets, where he daily meets the local public and introduces and explains the merits of this remedy. Free samples given.—Advertisement.

TODAY'S STOCK MARKETS

By W. H. ROSS, Financial Editor

Stocks were very quiet at the opening, many leading issues being unchanged. Irregularity prevailed where there was action. The tendency was downward. Traders were chary of commitments and the public is holding aloof. While there is less fear of relations between this country and Germany becoming more strained there is little inclination to assume speculative risks until international relations for the future can be definitely determined. Foreign exchange was no firmer in tone, and the outlook for money rates will take soon in view of foreign requirements, is a question of great moment. The stock market this morning showed the uncertainty that has featured it for several days. While fundamental domestic conditions are good, business in general is expanding very slowly. This country is feeling the deprivation of foreign markets for many of its manufactures. War supply shipments, however large, do not support national export prosperity.

MOST STOCKS DECLINED.

Among the early declines in New York were American Smelting ¼, Baltimore & Ohio ¼, Canadian Pacific 1¼, Lehigh Valley ¼, Pennsylvania ¼, Reading ¾, Anaconda ¼, American Locomotive ¼, Bethlehem Steel 1, Studebaker ¼, U. S. Rubber 1¼, Westinghouse ¼, and Rock Island 1. Consolidated Gas at low price for the year. Among gains were Amalgamated ¼, New Haven ¾, Utah Copper ¾, General Electric ¼, General Motors ¾, Goodrich ¾ and Northern Ore ¼. U. S. Steel, United Pacific and Southern Pacific were unchanged.

TRADING DULL HERE.

The Boston market was very dull. American Zinc being the most active issue. Coppers were sluggish. Losses included U. S. Smelting ¼, United Shoe ¼, Mohawk ¼ and American Zinc ¼. Among recessions were Alaska Gold ¼, American Woolen preferred ½, Greene-Cananea ¼, North Butte ¼, Osceola ¼ and New Haven ¾.

Copper producers are still awaiting a resumption of metal trading. The London spot and futures were off £2 6s. each, while electrolytic was up 10s. Lead was 12s. 9d. higher there, while spelter advanced 10 10s. Spelter prices are ranging higher in this country. Little can be obtained for nearby delivery and the August supply is scarce.

MEANWHILE, Tommy had been invited to live with the Gunsdorfs, and had carried his belongings to their house. This was an unpretentious structure exactly like several hundred others in Bitumen. It differed only from the majority in the fact that it was one of the two end houses of a long row.

Downstairs there was an entrance hall which contained a hat rack. On the left as you entered was a room that was a dining room when it wasn't a sitting room and vice versa. Back of this was a kitchen and store closet.

Upstairs there was a large bedroom and a small one, and two closets. Above these there was an attic with head room for a dwarf. A faucet in the kitchen sink supplied running water.

Similar mansions in Bitumen housed a dozen people. Tommy was lucky to have a whole room, however small, to himself. There was also in the back yard a well with a bucket, and here, if a man really wanted a bath, and was willing to get up so early that nobody would see him, he could get one.

As leader of the discontented, Gunsdorf ran an open house. There was always talk and something to drink in the front room downstairs. Here, policies were hatched just as they are in the Cabinet room in Washington, and here drinks of the most vile rye whiskey could be had by the lubricated for the asking.

From the very first, Mrs. Gunsdorf had done her best to make Tommy comfortable. Not a lady woman by nature, she put her house in order for his benefit and kept it so.

From the nothing place in the kitchen at which you combed your hair before meals, she scrubbed the fly specks. She bought a new comb with a full complement of teeth to hang on the chain, she washed the roller towel, and for the first time in her life took an interest in cooking, seeking instruction from neighbors who had reputations in that line.

But she managed for a time to confine her amorous feelings toward Tommy to deeds and attentions. She tried to make her manner toward him just what it was to other young men who came to the house. But when discussion was hot in the front room, and the whiskey was going, and nobody was noticing her, she rested her eyes on his brown face and her ears on his quiet, resonant, well-bred voice.

It was a shirt-sleeve house. Directly you came in, you hung your coat on one of many hooks in the hall, and if you had been much on your feet, you sat with them on the table after removing your shoes. This last was a custom which Tommy found himself unable to adopt; but he hung his coat in the front hall, with the others, and got used to sitting in a room in which, to use his own phrase, the atmosphere was "chained to the floor."

Mrs. Gunsdorf was always coming and going. She would appear, silent as a ghost, listen for a while to what the men had to say, and as silently vanish. Sometimes she "shoved in her oar." And she had a gift of hitting the nail on the head. But she spoke always with a kind of restrained, feline ferocity.

All the time her mind was filled with thoughts and visions of Tommy. Sometimes she would take his coat from its hook and strain it to her breast. Sometimes when he was out of the house she would go to his room, and sit by the hour, feasting herself on day dreams of him.

In her mind, at least, she was already fairbless to her husband. But this did not trouble her in the least. If she ever had a conscience or moral scruples of any kind about anything, all these had vanished with her first sight of Tommy.

If Tommy had suspected her admiration for him, he would have felt very sorry for her, and he would have changed his lodging. But his mind was very innocent about women; and he accepted the flowers which appeared on his bureau in a cracked shaving cup just as he would have accepted the same flowers growing in a wood.

It was some time before he even realized that she was very good looking, in a sullen smouldering way, that her eyes and teeth were fine, and that she had a lithe, strong, panthersque way of moving.

One day there was a violent socialistic discussion going on in the front room. Mrs. Gunsdorf had appeared twice at the hall door to listen, and gaze surreptitiously at Tommy, and had twice vanished upon some household duty or other.

Their Married Life

Helen Tries to Patch Up the Quarrel Between Louise and Bob

Copyright, 1915, International News Service.

"WHERE shall we go to tea?" Louise had said when Helen called up that morning, and Helen had answered that they would decide later.

They had agreed to meet downtown on the subway platform at Park street, a typical meeting place for all kinds of people, thought Helen as she looked around for Louise, saw that she hadn't come, and proceeded to buy a magazine and to sit down and wait. Louise had been shopping all morning, while Helen had come down town.

Helen had been little of Louise of late. She guessed that Louise was avoiding her purposely, and it hurt Helen to have Louise think it necessary. Surely there was nothing that she would hesitate about confiding if she had been in Louise's place. But, then, perhaps Louise had repented of telling things to Helen in the first place. She hoped this were not going to turn out like that.

The usual crowd edified in and out of the subway. There were plenty of things to watch and smile at. Helen was deeply absorbed in a very young girl with suspiciously pink cheeks who had her black hair cut short around her face and who was talking earnestly to a blond young man, when Louise came up. Louise looked shockingly ill. There was dark circles under her eyes, and even her charming costume failed to relieve her paller. Helen was alarmed, but she said nothing, resolved to be careful. Surely she could not force Louise's confidence, and yet matters had apparently reached a point when she perhaps ought to interfere.

"Well, have you decided on a place?" said Louise, as they emerged out into the sunlight.

"I know of a dear little place," said Helen, "if you would rather not go to a hotel. I feel like a cozy little place where we can chat, don't you?"

Louise tried to answer gaily and failed miserably. Helen felt heart sorry for her, and wondered what it could be that would rob Louise of her spontaneity.

HELEN FINDS THE NEW ADDRESS.

They walked down the street in search of the tearoom in question, and found instead an empty place.

"I wonder if they could have moved?" said Helen, puzzled. She hated to give up her first choice of little place that had left such an impression on her.

"Suppose we go look in the telephone book," suggested Louise, with an effort to regain her old manner, as they passed a drug store.

"Here it is," said Helen, triumphantly, a moment later. "They have moved down a little ways. Come on, we'll find it in no time now, and if you approve of my choice I'll be disappointed."

Helen chattered on gaily, trying not to notice Louise and her preoccupied manner. They reached the little tearoom. Louise looked interested and Helen felt relieved to take against the tearoom.

"Shall we have buttered muffins and tea?" suggested Helen. "The muffins are delicious here."

The pretty little girl bridled at the compliment, and Helen ordered orange pekoe tea and hot buttered muffins, with some fresh strawberries and cream to finish off.

"And now, Louise," she said, impulsively, "please tell me what is wrong and let me help you. It makes me perfectly miserable when you look as you do and I can't help you."

Tears sprang to Louise's eyes, but she hesitated visibly. Helen's frankness taking her by surprise, she shook her head.

"There is nothing you can do," she insisted, "and I hate to bother you with my troubles; quarrels are always so sordid."

"I know they are, dear, but I want to help. Surely you won't refuse to let me do my share?"

LOUISE TELLS HELEN OF HER TROUBLES

"Yes; you know I am not happy when I know you feel this way. Didn't you make it up with Bob?"

"Oh, I tried, Helen; but he was not ready to make up. He was so hard and relentless, and wanted me to humble myself to the ground, and I could not. In all self-respect —you know what I mean. Why, I haven't been happy since, and I have tried to be nice. He just won't let me, that's all. He makes me feel as though he ridiculed everything I do. I can't explain further than that."

Helen was surprised. She had no idea that things had gone so far, although Bob had acted strangely the evening she and Warren had been there.

"Are you sure, dear, that you haven't done more than you think you have to hurt him?"

"Why, yes," said Louise, opening her eyes wide.

Helen thought for a moment, and as the tea things came, she poured the fragrant liquid and saw that Louise were provided with enough to keep her busy.

Then she leaned forward over the teacups and said sweetly:

"The thing for you to do is to let Bob come to you. Don't let him think you are unhappy."

"But I am," wailed Louise, interrupting.

"I know you are, but you must not show it. It didn't care, Bob has been a brute to you, and of course he is waiting for you to be properly humble before he decides to forgive you. Don't do it, that's all."

"But, Helen, it's so hard to act that way."

"I know it, but I am trying to make for you a course. I never adopted it's too late now and Warren knows me too well not to see through it, but for goodness' sake, Louise, don't be foolish for the first time Helen admitted to an outsider her knowledge of Warren.

Louise was interested. "I never believed things would have been this way between Bob and me," she said, "but you're right, Helen, and I really am tired of being petted. I spent the several nights trying to think what to do, but I'll begin right away to act as if nothing had happened. Bob is going to the theater tonight and I'll be asleep when he comes home. Tomorrow I ought to feel well enough to act naturally."

"And after the first time it will be easy, Louise, dear. I would be happy if I thought I had really helped this time.

A Square Deal for Husbands

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX.

"IT'S a man's world!" says the average woman, with a saucy flirt of her skirts, and proceeds to disprove her assertion!

It's everybody's world and the spirit of fair play and chivalry and of age-old desire to protect those he cared for makes it a particularly pleasant place for women—unless these foolish sisters choose to cast in their lots with brutes instead of men, and from this point of disadvantage to arraign forevermore all manhood.

Any woman who marries a sane, decent, hard-working, law-abiding, normal citizen can have a happy marriage if she chooses to make it so. The atmosphere of the home is the wife's business even as the pay envelope is the husband's. The wife who works out and helps support the household owes it a little extra attention, too.

If you can earn $20 a week, Madame, and you send up his meat a $5 cook to do the work you find inconvenient, it is not left up to you to see that you have a good cook.

Most men are little boys. And as such they like to be petted a bit and coaxed into amiability with gentle and kind words. They don't like to be nagged at or to be urged into doing things they find hopelessly uncongenial.

Men cannot understand the awestruck attitude of their women folk over "What will people say?" No sane man would dream of going off to the country and baking in hot, stuffy bedrooms for three weeks in order to impress the Smiths and Browns with his social position as one who was affluent enough to take a Summer outing.

And yet the women folks persist and nag at him until he does it perforce—and with very bad grace because of the savings it wastes and the extra work and worry it means. And then they judge him a stingy old tyrant and feel abused. The really abused person is the poor "tyrant."

Men are not orderly beings. They fling the ten sections of the Sunday newspaper all about the living room and scatter cigar ashes about carpets and ornaments. There is no object in goading them to fury by cold remarks as to how hard you work to make their home attractive. They just naturally scatter cigar ashes and Sunday supplements, even as you drop occasional hairpins half the time.

But men are clean creatures. They don't straggle frowsily about the home in down-in-the-heel slippers and torn and soiled garments. The woman who is so busy saving her clothes for "the stranger within the gates," that she habitually appears before her husband in torn aimless, may defend herself by explaining that John goes unshaven half the time.

Well—what's sauce for the gander is often sauce for the goose! John may have appeared unshaven before Mary in their courtship days. And Mary accepted his excuse that it made his face sore to shave every day. But John never saw Mary in a kimono that was six months away from its last season with the washtub.

If he had there would have been no wedding bells for Mary—for men are born beauty worshippers. And women marry them knowing this—and calmly proceed to deprive them of beauty in everyday life and then to wonder why they wander afield seeking the loveliness that friend wife supplied when she was only his "friend."

Kindness, encouragement, sympathy—these are what the average man craves. He marries for them—and love is its first glow. And the glow of love would keep on a-glimmering if only women were less remiss about supplying the kindness, encouragement and sympathy that the little boy who is a husband, too, wants!

Do You Know That—

There are 274 inhabitants per square mile in the United Kingdom, 192 in France, 19 in Russia, 311 in Germany, 222 in Austria, 618 in Belgium, 143 in Servia, 49 in Turkey, and 256 in Japan.

Hampton Court possesses a grape vine which is stated to surpass any in Europe. In an ordinary season it produces about 2,000 bunches of grapes, weighing 1,800 pounds.

The expression "Picked into shape" arises out of the popular superstition that a bear's cub is born an amorphous mass, and is licked into shape by its mother.

About three hundred species of turtle and tortoises are known. Some of these attain a very large size.

There is a dearth of females in Bulgaria, Japan and Australia, but a large surplus in England, Scotland, Switzerland and Scandinavia.

"Hurrah!" was originally a fighting exclamation, and is derived from the Slavonic "Hurap!—"To Paradise"—the belief being that valiant fighters went straight to heaven if killed.

The phrase "to lionize a man"—to stare at him as a wonderful person—arose when a show of lions was the great attraction at the Tower of London and everyone went and stared.

Your salary is your "salt money." Soldiers once received salt as part of their pay. When the salt was commuted for cash the latter was called "salerium," salt money, or "salary."

In the Franco-Prussian war of 1870 the Germans possessed maps of France marked with roads which had not yet appeared on maps officially issued in France.

Lamps with horn sides were invented by King Alfred.

Zoe---The Story of a Great Love

(Copyright, Associated Newspapers, Ltd. Serial rights in U. S. A. held by International News Service.)

By CORALIE STANTON and HEATH HOSKEN.

"THE events of last night," said Mr. Paton quietly.

But Crawley did not show the slightest sign of nervousness. He was a man steeled against all manner of feeling now—a fatalist waiting on events, dead to affect, careless of results, only bent on playing the game to the very last, and so to speak, flying game.

"By the way," he said, "you might give me the particulars. I presume Sir Godfrey has consulted you?"

"Exactly." And Mr. Paton briefly told the artist exactly what had transpired, adding that at present the only theory they had to work on was the extraordinary secret visit of Lady Brooke to Hatchington early in the day of her disappearance, and the somewhat nocturnal visit of Sir Godfrey to his Hatchington house last night.

"So that is all you know?" exclaimed Crawley.

"Absolutely," retorted Paton.

"Well, I'm sorry," answered Crawley, "but I can't help you in any way. I accompanied Sir Godfrey to Hatchington, and I returned with him this morning. He dropped me here. And that is all I can say."

"You suspect foul play?"

"I can say nothing. How could I?"

"Yes, of course," agreed Mr. Paton, somewhat cryptically. "How could you?"

The next day all the world knew. There was no keeping it out of the newspapers.

Lady Brooke, the beautiful wife of the new K. C. M. G., the great Godfrey Brooke, traveller, explorer, Empire maker—had most mysteriously disappeared, leaving no trace behind her.

Twenty-four hours passed, forty-eight and no result. The police had completely failed to supply a solution to the baffling mystery.

Crawley had summoned up courage to call on Brooke early in the morning after his interview with Mr. Paton. The change in Brooke was startling, appalling. He sat huddled up in an armchair, his great rugged head bowed low on his chest, his strong, capable hairy hands hanging limp by his side.

"Brooke, old man," Crawley ventured at last; "I can't tell you how sorry I am to hear the news."

But, as he spoke the mockery of the whole thing struck him with peculiar force. What a monstrous farce it all was! What a tragedy, what a betrayal, what a lie!

Brooke raised his haggard face. His eyes were bloodshot.

"Old man," he said weakly, "this seems like judgment on us—me, at any rate."

"Why didn't you send for me?" asked Crawley. "Why didn't you tell me before? I had no idea."——Again the torrent of lies died on his lips for very shame.

"Somehow or other," said Brooke, "I felt I didn't want to. I—well, I hardly know how to explain it, somehow, I felt I'd rather meet the blow alone. But, tell me, old man, what does it mean? What can possibly have happened?"

Crawley shook his head. He had, for the moment, lost his power of speech. A great overwhelming force had suddenly arisen within him, a force driving him irresistibly on to the only honorable escape—the one right course that had always been open before him. For one dizzy moment he was on the very brink of telling Brooke the truth; then the Alter man's next words froze the great confession hovering on his lips.

"Something tells me," he said, in solemn tones, "that Di is dead."

"Oh, nonsense!" interrupted Crawley, with a ghastly smile.

"Yes, my son," Brooke went on, "something tells me she is dead. I had a dream last night. It seemed to me that she came and spoke to me, kissed me, smoothed out the lines on my forehead." The great, strong man was crying like an overwrought woman. Those tears saved his reason. "Oh, I loved her so—I loved her so!"

Crawley caught his breath and shivered. Brooke had unconsciously repeated the very words of Zoe—the last words of that poor, harassed soul as it drifted out into the vast unknown.

During the next few days Crawley never wavered.

"Brooke must never know." That was now, as it had been in the past, his battle cry.

Brooke was never the same man again. He lived in the past and on the memory of the woman who had so completely filled his life.

As for Crawley, little need be said. Six months after the tragic happenings recounted in this story he married Eva Warren.

And in the years to come Noel Crawley had often to ask himself: "Was it justified?" But he could never answer the question. All he could say was: "Brooke never knew."

THE END.

Lime-Loss in Tuberculosis

In the Journal of the American Medical Association (January 17, 1914) was the following:

"It has been many times stated that in tuberculosis or in the pre-tuberculosis stage an increased amount of lime (lime) is lost with the urine and feces. In fact, a demineralization has been thought to be a forerunner of the development of tuberculosis."

If you have lost any lime loss, the scientific Eckman's Alterative in its treatment of tuberculosis, because in its content of a lime salt so combined with other valuable ingredients as to be easily assimilated.

Always we have urged consumptives to attend strictly to matters of food, but after some effective remedial agent is needed. In many cases of apparent recovery Eckman's Alterative seems to have supplied this need. It contains no opiate, narcotic or habit-forming drugs, so is safe to try. Sold by all R.R.'s Drug Stores and leading druggists.

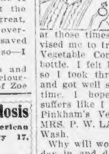
This Does More Than Remove Hair

Unlike pastes and rub-on preparations which only remove hair from the surface of the skin, this method devitalizes it. It robs hair of its vitality by attacking it under the skin as well as on the skin. Pictorial Review says: De Miracle, the original liquid depilatory, is "a boon to afflicted women." Only genuine publications of the highest character are quoted by us. Beware of so-called hair removers which are supposedly recommended through bogus quotations from so-called magazines which do not exist.—Advertisement.

IN SUCH PAIN WOMAN CRIED

Suffered Everything Until Restored to Health by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.



Florence, So. Dakota.—"I used to be very sick every month with bearing-down pains and backache, and had headache a good deal of the time and very little appetite. The pains were so bad that I used to sit right down on the floor and cry, because it hurt me so and I could not do any work at those times. An old woman advised me to try Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, and sent me a bottle. I felt better the next month, so I took three more bottles of it and got well. I could work all the time. I hope every woman who suffers like I did will try Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound."—MRS. P. W. LANSENG, Box 8, Allyn, Wash.

Why will women continue to suffer day in and day out, drag out a sickly, half-hearted existence, missing three-fourths of the joy of living, when they can find health in Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound?

For thirty years it has been the standard remedy for female ills, and has restored the health of thousands of women who have been troubled with such ailments as displacements, inflammation, ulceration, tumors, irregularities, etc.

Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, made from native roots and herbs, contains no narcotics or harmful drugs, and today holds the record of being the most successful remedy for women's ills known.

THE undersigned Boston stores take great pleasure in announcing, beginning tomorrow (Wednesday) morning, elaborate displays of

Hand-made Laces from Belgium

To Be Sold in the Interests of Relief

These laces have been purchased from or consigned to us by the Commission for Relief in Belgium. We are doubly gratified to offer the merchandise to which this announcement relates – first, because of the genuine values it represents, and then because of the humane impulse back of its presentation.

THIS SALE will have an especial appeal to New England women since, in addition to the exquisite art the laces embody, their disposal at this time means the extension of a generous hand of relief across the sea at a time when it is sorely needed.

The stocks in this exceptional offering embrace

NECKWEAR HANDKERCHIEFS SCARFS VEILS
FACES-BY-THE-YARD DOILIES CENTREPIECES
TABLE COVERS BEDSPREADS

PATRONESSES

In view of the fact that this is all hand-work, the prices will be found surprisingly small

Eager to assist in such a practical manner of rendering aid to Belgium, the Boston women named herewith have kindly consented to act as patronesses of this event.

LANGFORD-M'VEY BATTLE TONIGHT

ATLAS A. A. PROGRAM

Sam McVey, California, vs. Sam Langford, Cambridge, twelve rounds.

Dave Powers, Malden, vs. George Alger, Cambridge, eight rounds.

Howard McRae, Cambridge, vs. "Young" Stone, Boston, six rounds.

"Young" Casey, Boston, vs. "Young" Breeze, Revere, six rounds.

By JACK CONWAY

A SLASHING ring battle is expected when Sam Langford and Sam McVey, the world's leading negro boxers, clash in a twelve-round bout at the Atlas A. A. tonight. The tussle has aroused a great deal of interest among the "Fans," and a large crowd is expected to be on hand to witness the festivities.

Betting on tonight's tussle is at even money. The chances are, however, that Langford will enter the ring a slight betting favorite.

On paper it looks as though Langford and McVey will put up the best heavyweight match which has been staged in a Boston ring for several years. Langford has been a principal in numerous contests at the Arena, since he returned from Australia, but he has outclassed most of his opponents and has won the majority of his bouts with ease.

"GUNBOAT" SMITH, "Kid" Cotton and Colin Bell were all outclassed by Langford. Battling Jim Johnson went the distance with the Cambridge "Bone Crusher," but he was not Sam's equal, and the decision, which was a draw, was a very poor one.

Joe Jeanette was awarded a decision over Langford in April. Joe Woodman's protege was not in the best of condition for that encounter. There were big rolls of fat around his waist line, while he was very slow in moving around the ring. It will be a different story this evening, according to Woodman. He says that Sam has prepared himself carefully for his whirl with McVey and that he will enter the ring in better condition than he has been in since he returned to the country after his trip to Australia.

THERE is but little need to write about McVey's condition. He is one of those athletes who is always prepared to enter a ring with a high class opponent. He does not indulge in any form of intoxicating liquors, while he has yet to smoke his first cigar.

McVey has a great ambition. It is to win from Langford by a knockout. The big negro believes he possesses enough ability to accomplish such a feat. He stated today that he does not believe that "Tha Ho" is as good as he was a few years ago, while he claims that he himself is boxing as good today as he has at any time during his career in the ring.

GEORGE LAWRENCE, manager of McVey, expects his protege to win. In discussing the matter today he said:

"McVey has prepared himself carefully for tonight's encounter. He recently fought Joe Jeanette at the Atlas A. A. and the contest was called a draw after twelve rounds of boxing. McVey was not at his best when he clashed with Jeanette. He had suffered from an attack of malaria a short time prior to his encounter with the powerful Hoboken negro. But regardless of this handicap he gave Jeanette A great battle, and in my opinion he was entitled to the decision.

"SAM has now recovered from his recent illness and will be at his best when he faces Langford. McVey's greatest ambition in life was been to knockout the 'Tar Baby.' I realize that Langford is the hardest hitting heavyweight in the world, but I also contend that he will take the count if he is hit hard enough on the right spot. Langford is not as good a fighter as he formerly was, while McVey is at the top of his game, as a golfer would express it. Therefore I expect McVey to finish in front at the Atlas Club tonight."

THE semi-final bout of eight rounds, which will be between Dave Powers of Malden and George Alger, has attracted an unusual amount of interest. Powers and Alger are both clever boxers and hard punchers and should furnish a lively session. Fred Nolan, manager of Powers, expects the Malden youth to win, while Alger is also confident of grabbing off the high honors.

There will also be a couple of six-round bouts.

CORNELL NOSES OUT STANFORD

By CONSTANCE S. TITUS.
America's Foremost Amateur Oarsman.

POUGHKEEPSIE, N. Y., June 29 — Cornell, first; Leland Stanford, second; Syracuse, third; Columbia, fourth; Pennsylvania, fifth.

Although defeated, the entire varsity crew from Stanford University rowed the race of its life, and in my opinion was the equal of the most remarkable exhibitions of physical endurance I have ever seen. Taking every advantage of the tides at the start of the race, the California crew opened up a gap of almost a length on the field at the quarter-mile mark.

STANFORD CAME HARD.

They relinquished this lead to the Syracuse eight at the mile and trailed that opponent even by three-quarters of a length.

Between both mile posts Leland Stanford put on a wonderful spurt and forged to the front by a length. In the last two-mile pull Cornell had three-quarters of a length to the good, while Stanford led Penn by a length and Columbia had a lead of a length on columbia.

At this point Stanford collapsed with the strain and Cornell added the same to the leaders, leading the aggregation at the two individual records of the day. Pennsylvania came close to six lengths to the rear.

At the Poughkeepsie bridges at the three-mile mark, Cornell had a half length of open water on Syracuse, with Columbia and Pennsylvania fighting it out for third place.

Columbia had just passed Pennsylvania and was trailing by but a few feet.

CALIFORNIANS HAVE SPRINT.

A quarter of a mile from home Stanford put on another great spirit and with one of the prettiest sprints ever witnessed by Poughkeepsie rowing enthusiasts, rapidly but steadily began to lengthen its lead. Cornell responded gamely, but could not hold the Californians, who finished with a lead of a length and a half over the Ithacans.

Cornell's junior eight also came along with a wide margin of victory, leading Columbia by a length and a half, Syracuse by two lengths and Pennsylvania by three lengths behind. Columbia finished four lengths behind the winners, while Syracuse and Pennsylvania were in a dead heat.

BIG BIKE BATTLE FOR GOLDEN WHEEL

Four of the greatest one-hour motor-paced riders in the country will meet in endurance and speed in the Golden Wheel Race at the Revere Cycle Track tomorrow night.

No contest scheduled for the beach oval this season has drawn such a select field as this one. The starters will be: George Wiley, Victor Linart, Clarence Carman and Leon Didier.

The Golden Wheel Race is an honor that every biker strives to win, for besides the coveted cycle, there is a good, healthy purse attached to the winner's earnings.

Victor Linart, the flying Belgian with an unblemished record is being picked to win. His adherents back up their opinion with a good sound argument, pointing out that he has won both of the one-hour races staged at the beach this season.

On the other hand, it must be considered that Linart has never yet had such a strong field against him as he will have tomorrow evening. Here he is meeting Carman, the national middle distance champion; Wiley, who held the title two years ago, and Didier, one of the best riders ever turned out of Europe.

If Linart is able to outride this trio, then he justly deserves the honor of being classed as one of the best riders in the world—an honor which, in the opinion of many, he has already won.

Star Professionals in 12-Mile Race

The twelve-mile professional cross-country run of the Scottish Clans games promises to be one of the greatest events of its kind ever held in or near Boston. The judges' prized will amount to $375 and this fact will in itself bring the best professionals in the country to Boston for this run. Walter Scott, who for years has been one of the mainstays of the games, has donated $150, which will be awarded to the first place winner. Harry Lauder, the comedian, has given $125 for a second prize and James E. Gaffney, president of the Boston National baseball team, will give $100 to the athlete making the best time. The race will start at City Hall and the course will be through the Back Bay to the Fens, around Jamaica Pond and Forest Hills and out to Caledonian Grove, where the race will finish after the athletes have run two miles on the track.

Frank Baker Is Not Batting in Old Form

MEDIA, Pa., June 29.—The official average of the Delaware County League for the nine games played so far this season have been compiled and show that Dave of Media, is the leading hitter of the league, with a batting average of .429. Turner has been to bat thirty-five times and has fifteen hits, five of which are doubles, two triples and three homers.

Thirteen players are hitting above the .300 mark, but this list does not include Frank Baker, former third baseman for the Athletics, who is hitting only at the .235 mark. Baker is forty-fifth on the list of holders, he having had four errors in twenty-three chances.

Griffith Suspends Infielder Morgan

WASHINGTON, June 29.—Manager Griffith to-day suspended indefinitely Ray Morgan, the Senators' second sacker, when the latter informed him he could not play yesterday because he was "shaken up" in an auto accident.

Fresh Favors for Fans

By H. W. LANIGAN

Del Gainer, going up for Ray Collins at the start of the eighth essay in the opening skit at Fenway Park yesterday, laced out a loud line lurrop to deep centre, which Chester Hugh Hilly pulled down. The blow was the healthiest one of the afternoon. It should have gone through, and if it had not been clutched by the ex-Tiger, the Red Sox would not have opened the day with a defeat. 'Twas the first ball Del soaked and the bell sounded all to the merry when it started out. But unfortunately it went out on a bee line to High and Hugh hooked on. As Hooper followed with a triple and Speaker with a single, Gainer's smash, if not pulled down, would have turned the doleful defeat into a most voluptuous victory.

* * *

The Donovans are playing good ball. The Smiter took hold of an out-and-out tallender when he drew his New York assignment. The Yankees finished locked with Chicago last year, Cleveland being the only team trailing the two clubs home. Barring the White Sox, ends when Efficient Eddie Collins was bought from C. Mack by C. Comiskey, the Yankees are the most improved ball club in the big arena. Donovan has taken practically the same lot of men who failed so dismally under the well press-agented Frank Chance and whipped them into quite a fifty-appearing machine. Hugh and Pipp were secured from Detroit. Otherwise the Yankees are the same as a year ago. But there's a sparkle to their play this Summer, and Donovan has got to be complimented for the good results he has gained. A lot of the Red Sox's supporters were confident their pets would clean up the Yankees in the same fashion the White Sox annihilated the Indians. Instead, the Broadway Boys have practically held their own in the attenuated series; in fact, if they cop today they will make it a draw.

* * *

The Red Sox are not playing championship ball. That's a positive pipe. Wood, Scott and Leonard are good; missed Collins' triumphs to date total but one, though Ray seems about due to at last. Still, late June is a heluva of a date for a burling wo to get on his true stride, and while Ray has been showing symptoms of getting going in his last several outs, he really has not come through as yet. Current swat notches show a lot. Lewis is the lone regular in the .300 class and Duffy is just embraced in it. Speaker is barely sticking .250 for fifty-six matinees. Carrigan's keystone pair, Wagner and Scott, own marks around .215. For Chicago E. Collins is clouting some .325 and Weaver bids fair to climb into the .300 set, so harshly and timely is "Buck" belting the ball. The Hose's extra-base stuffing is way off. Lewis, with an even dozen, leads in the manufacture of doubles. Even Rabbit Maranville owns sixteen such blows. Barring Ruth, the Red Sox haven't a representative among the first fifteen pill-picklers. Speaker stands eighth among the pilfering—fourteen steals against Cobb's forty-nine. Hooper, in eighteenth place, is the first Bostonian listed among the run-registerers. All this forms a fetching dope and shows vehemently that the Hose must hit up a noisier attack if they are to climb in the race.

* * *

Yesterday "Happy" Felsch did it for the White Sox. Where E. Collins simpled the pillows against the Browns Sunday with a timely triple, "Happy" doled a like drive and St. Louis dropped another tough one. Schalk opened the third round with a triple. Blackburne walked; so did Scott. Then Felsch busted out his triple. Weaver's onespat sent "Happy" over. Shotten's double and Pratt's single gave the Browns their first run, while doubles by Leary and Lavan netted the second and final count.

* * *

Sisler, the University of Michigan youth, pitched the last three innings for the Browns. He yielded two blows, whiffed two batters and issued one free ticket. Southern sharks claim that Sisler is a particularly port prospect.

D. V. J. Scott's record: 16—2.

Detroit played the Cleveland Jokes and it scarcely need be added that the ship of Tristram Shandy. Four hits, two bobbles and two walks gave six runs in the third inning and the other settled the show. Hagerman was the redpleet of the slaughter. Harstad, out of the Northwest, did not allow a Tiger to reach first the five innings he worked.

Tyrus Cobb was rather quiet Up three times officially, he only poled out one hit, tallied one run and swiped his daily bag. That's forty-one steals for the Tiger and he should attain the half-century era real-time.

* * *

Master Minot Crowell of Melrose nearby, not being stalled nor pitted by C. Mack. On the contrary the Kid is drawing all the tough stuff. Bucking Ray Caldwell when making his A. L. debut, he lost out in the tenth after yielding but one blow in nine innings. Yesterday Minot was sent against Johnson, and but for Lapp's P. B. and a double steal he would have forced the show into extra rounds with a 5—0 tally up for breakage. Crowell's game was really almost as good as Johnson's; in fact, Minot was but slimly shaded by the King.

Athletes Must Give Number on Blanks

Frank X. McGrath, the official handicapper of the A. A. U. of New England, will refuse the entry of every athlete for the various games on the 4th of July, who fails to place his registration number on his entry blank. Annually there are a very large number of athletes who neglect to pput their registration numbers on the blanks and this necessitates a great deal of extra and unnecessary work for the handicapper, who with six or seven meets to look after has enough legitimate work. Athletes desiring to compete will do well to comply with McGrath's suggestion or he will throw out every entrance blank that is not made out correctly.

Butler Signed to Battle M'Farland

Walter Butler, the Revere boxer, has been matched to meet Tommy McFarland of Boston in the semi-final bout of eight rounds to the brilliant fifteen bustle which will be held at the Atlas A. A. next Tuesday night.

FABRE HERE FOR HOLIDAY BATTLE

Fresh from his second Marathon victory of the year, Edouard Fabre of Montreal, winner of the B. A. A. race, arrived in town today to finish his training for the twelve-mile modified Marathon race which will be the feature of the annual field day of Division 12, A. C. H., at the South End grounds next Monday.

Fabre won the twenty-five mile Marathon run of the La Casquette A. A. A. in Montreal last Thursday in hollow fashion, winning by more than three miles in 2 hours 1 minute. At no time was he forced to extend himself after the first five miles and finished as fresh as when he started. He realizes, however, that in order to defeat Cliff Horne, who finished second to him in the B. A. A. race, Al Horne and Fred Merchant, who finished among the first dozen, Jimmy Henigan, Arthur Roth and Fred Fuller, that he must be at his best and will spend the final week near the scene of their Monday struggle.

The Green football and hurling matches will decide the New England titles and the winners of the hurling games will compete at the Panama-Pacific Exposition and in New York later in the season. The winning games will bring together the following teams: Shamrocks of South Boston vs. Erins Own of Roxbury, Young Irelands of Cambridge vs. Emmets of Boston, and Gael Wanderers of south Boston vs. Redmonds of Roxbury.

The football matches are Norwood F. C. vs. County Clare, Galway vs. Tipperary, and Cork vs. Kerry.

To Shift Manchester Club to Greenfield

GREENFIELD, June 29.—Negotiations were completed with J. Thomas Keady, one of the owners of the Manchester, N. H. New England League team, for its transfer to Greenfield. The first game will be played next Wednesday with Pittsfield, and it is expected that at least 10 Saturday games will be arranged for. Already $1,000 has been raised for the support of the team.

To Settle Suit.

CHICAGO, June 29.—Judge Landis, in the United States District, probably an early decision to the injunction case involving outfielder claims the ball players brought about by the entrance into major baseball of the Federal League.

Brewers Buy Shawkey.

Willie Bill Donovan has purchased from Connie Mack Pitcher Bob Shawkey. This is another reduction in the ranks of the veteran leader for Connie Mack's payroll will soon correspond with Quaker City attendance figures.

Brother of Cornell Oarsmen Is Dead

POUGHKEEPSIE, N. Y., June 29.—Word was received here today that Robert Bird, brother of the Cornell crew oarsmen, died in the Pough-keepsie regatta was a tragedy to the Bird family, as Robert Bird, Jr., was to have rowed in the Cornell varsity eight. It had been the intention of Robert Bird to come to Pough-keepsie to see his brother row, but he was taken ill and could not come. Robert Bird rowed No. 6 in the Cornell varsity eight in 1912 and was a member of the Cornell crew that won the intercollegiate championship.

OUR FIRST DUTY IS TO MAINTAIN PEACE; OUR NEXT DUTY IS TO PREPARE FOR WAR

Progressives Should Ask Deserters to Republican Standpatism a Few Questions

No stone is being left unturned by way of personal consideration and private inducement to make the Progressive leaders abandon their independent movement and join the Republican ranks with a brass band.

The Republican politicians care nothing at all personally about the Progressive leaders. Generally they dislike them intensely. If they tolerate them for a moment it is merely for the purpose of discouraging the mass of Progressive voters, of breaking up their independent organization, their party solidarity and esprit de corps. When this is effected and the Progressive voters become as helpless as any large number of unorganized men always is, then we shall discover the real feelings of the Republican organization towards these Progressive leaders who are being induced to go over to the standpat Republican organization.

These leaders ought to remember that their party was not organized and that it did not receive the support of the Progressives for the purpose of putting them in office or of promoting their personal welfare as distinguished from that of their fellow Progressives. The Progressive organization, as every organization ought to be, was merely a means of promoting Progressive principles. When these leaders undertake to join the Republican party, the Progressives ought to ask them seven questions:

One—Has the Republican party changed its character and personnel in Massachusetts since the great revolt led by Theodore Roosevelt which founded the Progressive party in Massachusetts?

Two—Has the Republican party ceased to be a standpat party?

Three—Has it learned anything? Has it given any evidence of repentance since the organization of the Progressive party?

Four—Has it declared for any of the important Progressive principles? Can these leaders who are trying to break up the Progressive party and lead its members over to the Republican organization make the Republican party agree to stand for a single one of the fundamental policies of the Progressive party?

Five—Can these Progressive leaders justify the conduct of the Republican Legislature this year, which had a larger majority than in any five previous years and which has been more standpat than in ten years before?

Six—Can they give the Progressive voters any hope that the Republican party, which this year killed the Initiative and Referendum in the Republican Legislature without allowing it even to have the scanty recognition of a roll call, will support it next year?

Seven—Ask any one of these gentlemen who have become ambitious to hold office under the Republican party if it is not true that the Republican Legislature this year has been the worst Legislature that has sat on Beacon Hill in the last ten years—stupid, reactionary and controlled.

The AMERICAN does not undertake to advise the Progressive leaders or the Progressive voters, but the Progressive voters ought to be warned against the suggestion of participating in Republican primaries for the purpose of nominating Progressive leaders. It will be a mere trap unless these leaders can give assurance that the Republican party will make its principles conform with the principles of the Progressive voters. If the Progressives could capture the Republican party and make it a Progressive organization, it would be a splendid achievement. But the Progressive voters ought to ask Mr. Burbank and others WHAT THEY PROPOSE TO DO IN CASE THEY DO NOT SUCCEED IN CONVERTING THE STANDPAT REPUBLICAN ORGANIZATION TO THE PROGRESSIVE PRINCIPLES? Do they intend nevertheless to support that standpat organization at the polls? This is the acid test of their sincerity. If they are willing to support that organization, if it still remains unregenerate, then they are merely decoys. If they are sincere, they will be entirely willing to announce their intention to support the Republican party at the polls ONLY in case it declares for the initiative and referendum and other progressive principles. This, indeed, would be the ONLY WAY in which the standpat Republican party could be made to become progressive, for if the only price which they need to pay to capture the Progressive voters is to satisfy the personal ambition of SOME of their leaders, they certainly will not pay the higher price of yielding to the progressive principles.

Once-Overs

A smile, resting on a foundation of sincerity, is one of the most valuable things to the world.

It cheers when nothing else would make an impression.

It reaches a spot that words could not touch.

It gives a thrill of which no human agency is capable.

A smile has changed the whole course of a human life.

It can drive the devil out, and bring peace in.

A smile serves as the guide post at a turning point for a man who is hesitating at the intersection of two paths.

A smile is the sun that dissipates the clouds of despair.

It is just the ray of light that many a soul needs to make life seem preferable to death.

It is the cheapest and the most valuable gift we can make.

When smiles can do so much, why are we not more liberal with them.

Tells How a Girl May Succed as an Author

Compiled by Ethel Lloyd Patterson

Attitude of Mind

I THINK if I were asked what platitudinous motto to tack up over the desk of the girl who hopes to become an author it would be, "What cannot be cured must be endured—still try, try again." It is more than a motto; it is a religion—an attitude of mind which must be attained if the girl who is trying to write does not expect to be left a nervous wreck by her first two or three years of struggle. To each of us, sooner or later, comes real tragedy. And work mends broken hearts.

In the meanwhile do not worry over trifles. To be colloquial, don't "fuss." If the train is late, sit still; be calm. You cannot get out and run ahead of it, anyway. If the dinner doesn't come on time, don't bother. It either will come or it won't come; and unless there is something definite you can do to hurry it, all the bothering about it in the world is of no avail.

I put it thus forcibly because one can very easily understand if a woman's mind is occupied with petty details it cannot at the same time be occupied with a really big work. And fussing is a habit which grows. The more you permit yourself to worry about little things, the more the little things to worry about will seem to multiply. Paint in your life in broad strokes and with plenty of sunlight. Leave those who work on little patterns to design rugs for you to walk on.

Avoid narrowness and grievances as you would the devil himself. Cultivate tolerance toward everybody—with plenty of analytical criticism, however. Because you, personally, do not wish to do this or that is no earthly reason why some other girl might not only find it interesting, but proper. When I tell you not to harbor grievances, I do not mean to suggest that you allow anybody and everybody to "walk all over you." We each must defend our rights. But when the argument is over forget it, whether you win or lose. Common sense and sweet temper, ability to work in a workmanlike way, and an open mind, an indomitable perseverance and the eye that sees—were I to meet a girl who wished to write and who was endowed with these qualities I would watch to see her finish the race well in advance of the erratic geniuses who works in fits and starts, and is in a continual turmoil of emotion and hysteria.

In-Shoots

It is better to hold your nose by work than pull, but a pull will help some.

It is better to shun the man who prefers the vulgarity to the wit of a story.

Occasionally a few blustering blatherskites can put up a howl that sounds like "vox populi."

More Truth Than Poetry

An Old Friend Passes

A doctor, after careful study of the subject, has condemned the rocking chair as an implacable foe to the health of the aged people who are addicted to its use.

FAREWELL, old-fashioned rocking chair!
No more may grandma sit
And hum a quaint old-fashioned air
And knit and knit and knit!
Condemned forever to disuse:
A doctor's diagnosis
Declares that rocking chairs induce Arteriosclerosis!

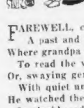
FAREWELL, cast off survival of
A past and easeful age,
Where grandpa dearly used to love
To read the woman's page,
Or, swaying gently to and fro
With quiet undulation,
He watched the dying embers glow
In placid meditation.



SOLACE of our declining days;
Throne of the sitting room;
Beneath the scientific gaze
You falter toward your doom.
The old who knew your soft delights,
Who sought your balm so gladly,
If they weren't tanguing these nights
They'd miss you very badly!

New Standards for Big Business

An Address to the National Real Estate Convention

By Stoddard Jess

LOS ANGELES, Cal., June 28.—The address of Stoddard Jess, one of the ablest and most progressive bankers of the Southwest, vice-president of the First National Bank of Los Angeles, before the National Real Estate Convention, has attracted wide attention throughout the entire West. Mr. Jess spoke before delegates representing business interests in all parts of the world, who applauded his diagnosis of the ills of big business:

Mr. Jess said in part:

"STANDARDS in the conduct of business are constantly changing. Methods that were common and upheld in years gone by are no longer regarded as right and proper. The ethical standards recognized in all lines of business are being raised to higher and even higher levels. As the late Elbert Hubbard puts it: 'There is growing up in America a religion in business. The religion of now and here. It remembers the week-day to keep it holy. The Golden Rule is today playing a big part in business. We are doing unto others as we would be done by, and this for the best possible reasons, both because it is right and because it pays.

"The repression of business which we have seen, and are experiencing, the untoward conditions that have prevailed, and the losses that have been sustained in the business world during the past years as the result of the baiting of 'big business,' so-called, are the penalties we have had to pay for the wrong methods used in building and financing our railroad systems, and in the formation of some of our great trusts.

"In the building of some railroads by construction companies, owned by the officers of the road, by the methods employed in financing the amalgamation of separate lines of roads into great systems, and by the methods followed in merging competitive units, engaged in the same line of business, into one corporation or trust, the foundations of many of our great fortunes were laid, and by ways that were as easy and as free from risk as it would be 'to take candy away from a little child.' The enormous profits realized by such methods, represented by watered stocks, entailed a burden on posterity, to allow fair earnings on the inflated valuations. The penalty we are now called upon to pay for such wrongdoing is the mass of repressive legislation that has been enacted, both State and National, in the attempt to regulate all manner of business.

"It is encouraging to note as a sign of the times that this popular movement against 'big business' appears to have spent its force. It is fair to conclude that the pendulum will soon swing the other way, and the importance of 'big business,' under proper regulation, as a factor of our national prosperity, will be more fully protected and recognized. The recent decision in favor of the United States Steel Corporation and against the government evidences the change in sentiment that is taking place. It will encourage those who do things to feel that it will be no longer the policy of the government to handicap 'big business' by antagonizing its development and by putting obstacles in the way of progress.

"To disintegrate our great industrial corporations would sound the death knell to our successful competition in manufactured products in the markets of the world.

"The estimate of the business man as to what constitutes success is rapidly changing. Many thinking men are challenging the estimate of the past, that success is to be measured by the accumulation of wealth. One of the costs of riches may be said to be the weakening and destruction of one's own family by removing the necessity for effort and exertion, and, by reason of the opportunity afforded through the use of money to indulge in those things that enervate instead of strengthen.

"Many thinking men are coming to the conclusion that they cannot afford such prizes at such a cost.

"In this world there is little that is worth while that can be bought.

"All must be acquired through our own exertions.

"There is only one way to get a strong arm or develop brain power, and that is by the exercise of either.

"To remove the necessity for action generally proves a severe handicap.

"The mad rush for wealth may be said to have been largely the result of fear—of a feeling that with wealth one would have the power to provide for and protect those near and dependent upon them.

"Business should be regarded as the science of human service. Money should come only incidentally to a service rendered.

"The satisfaction that comes from doing things that make for the protection and betterment of our fellow men, and from the kind word and deed that smoothes out the rough places in life's journey for others, brings us true happiness.

"Concentration and persistent effort in one direction make for success. Through organization a common conscience is developed and a code of ethics established that determines the relationship of each individual member to the other, to those with whom he has business relations, and then the world at large. Through such organizations ethical standards can be established, right methods inculcated and wrong methods decried.

"The National Association of Real Estate Exchanges is recognised as one of the most prominent among such organizations. It has a great mission to perform. The code of ethics of the real estate profession,' which it has adopted, promulgates and upholds the highest standard of business conduct. To stand by such a code and to fearlessly enforce its provisions will place the organization in the vanguard of the associations that stand for ethics in business, will insure the greater success of its members, and exert a world-wide influence for good.

"To establish and maintain high ethical standards for the members of your association is of greater importance because of the character and far-reaching effect of the business in which they are engaged; and to hold your members under restraints all the more creditable and helpful because of the opportunities and temptations that are ever open to them to ignore the ethics of the profession. In the banking business the latchstring always seems to be out and in reach of the individual who will exploit his fellow men.

"In the past the temptation to the man with a little money to embark in the banking business, receive deposits and so get control of more money to use to further his own selfish ends was greater than it is at the present time, because of the strict surveillance of State and nation under which the banking business is carried on, supplemented by the efforts of the bankers themselves, through the services of special examiners, to keep the business clean and undesirable men out of it.

"When a man has nothing else to do there seems to be a great temptation for him to embark in the real estate business. The capital required is nominal, the equipment inconsequential, previous experience considered not wholly necessary, and the opportunity for gain disproportionately great. It looks attractive. The temptation to grab at ready money as commission for closing sales by over-coloring the picture, holding out false inducements, misrepresenting the facts, or by other questionable methods, is so strong that men too frequently fall for it, not only to their own individual discredit, but, unfortunately, to the discredit of all others engaged in the business.

"To promote higher standards in business we must recognize that every man is, in a sense, our brother, and that we are, to a degree, 'our brother's keeper.' Because an act is not illegal it does not follow that it is necessarily right. It is not ethical, and should not be considered right, for a man engaged in selling real estate to sell anybody anything through over-persuasion, particularly when his financial condition and the circumstances do not warrant him in making the purchase.

"In selling real estate, as in every other business, to be strictly ethical one must apply the Golden Rule and 'Do unto others as you would have others do unto you,' not 'to do them first,' as David Harum advises, nor to do them at all, but to give them a square deal, if not from any sentimental reason, then because it is good business to do so, and the only way in which a business can be built up that will endure."
